

Investigative Consultants Internet Privacy Policy

Privacy Statement

Investigative Consultants is dedicated to protecting the privacy of visitors to its website. We use information in accordance with this Privacy Policy.

Information Collected

This site collects personally-identifiable information from you if you provide this information to us. Personally-identifiable information collected with your consent may include, for example, name, e-mail address and telephone number and information you provide relating to counterfeiting or piracy activities through our web site.

If someone sends us an e-mail, we may save the e-mail address. If we are sent personally-identifiable information about another person in connection with a service we provide, we may save that information.

We also collect information about where visitors go on our website. This information allows us to see which areas are most visited. This helps us improve the quality of visitors' online experience. Additional non-personally identifiable information (i.e., browser type and version, operating system, service provider, IP address, the date and time of each visit, the total number of visits to our website, the domain type of the visitor and the address of the Web site from which you reached us) may be automatically collected.

Use of Information Collected

We do not sell, rent, or trade any information to any third party. The information collected by this web site is used for investigation, communicating with you, communicating with clients of our investigative services and for the administration, review and improvement of the content of our web site. Information collected by us may be used for analysis and statistical purposes in order to improve the quality of your visit to our website. We may use professional service providers to work on our website. These professional service providers use this information only for work on our website.

We may disclose personally identifiable information in response to legal process, for example, in response to a court order or a subpoena. We also may disclose such information in response to a law enforcement agency's request, or where we believe it is necessary to investigate, prevent, or take action regarding illegal activities, suspected fraud, situations involving potential threats to the physical safety of any person, or as otherwise required by law. We may disclose personal information in the good faith belief that such action is necessary in order to conform to the law.\

Links

This web site may contain links to other web sites. When you click on one of these links, you are moving to another web site. We encourage you to read the privacy statements of these linked sites as their privacy policy, if any, may differ from ours. When users select a link to an outside web site, they are leaving Investigative Consultants and will be subject to the privacy and security policies of the outside web site. Investigative Consultants does not:

Control or guarantee either the information contained on a linked website or a linked web site's compliance with applicable law; Endorse the organization sponsoring a linked web site - unless expressly stated; Bear responsibility for materials the user receives from a linked web site

Security

We take steps to protect against the loss, misuse, or unauthorized alteration of personally-identifiable information collected through this web site. We recognize the importance of security for all personally-identifiable information collected by our web site.

Although we take appropriate measures to safeguard against unauthorized disclosures of information, we cannot guarantee that personally identifiable information that we collect will never be disclosed in a manner that is inconsistent with this Policy. Inadvertent disclosure may occur due to hackers accessing our site, equipment failures and human error. We are not responsible for such disclosures.

Changes

If our Internet Privacy Policy changes, we will post a notice of such change on our website.
